

"Ready... Aim... Action!"

John's Early Days...

...were spent growing up along a Pennsylvania countryside. He remembers those early childhood times when his biggest concern was, "which place to go fishing?" Yes, living in the "sticks" made him appreciate the down-to-earth kind of life. As a teenager John worked on a farm during his summer school break. It was hot, humid, dirty, and at times, back-breaking. However, it taught him the basics to the way he lives his life today. "If you're going to do something, you might as well put your focus and energy into it. You can't always live life on the idea of instant gratification... Some things just take work and time," John explains. That thinking has served him well over the years; from his days in the U.S. Marines, to starting his own successful electronics manufacturing company in Anaheim, California. John has never taken on a task with a half-hearted interest. When he commits, he goes the extra mile... and then some. -- John is definitely no quitter!

The Secret to His Success

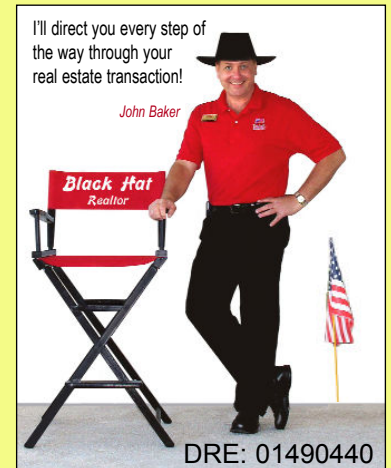

Where did this attitude come from? He found the inspiration from his parents, John and Mary Baker. "I had the good fortune as a youngster to have a wonderful family life. My mom and dad were heavily involved with all four of their children," John says. He often thinks of, and cherishes many of the great lessons his loving parents taught him. To this day he is very close to his family and looks forward to the times when they get together, share stories, and laugh 'till their bellies ache.

Energy at Work for You
